

Agriculture & Agribusiness

Farming operations, cooperatives, food production, agritech.

Friday, Eldredge & Clark lawyers have practical experience in serving the legal and business needs of agricultural producers, food processors, and their suppliers. We speak the language and understand the concerns of the agribusiness sector, and have particular experience assisting clients who have leading positions in the poultry industry and that are commodity producers and processors.

In addition to representing large agribusinesses, cooperatives, and individual farmers, we also represent large non-profit organizations that work to address the entire spectrum of public policy and governance issues facing agriculture. Our counsel is multidisciplinary, encompassing transactional, regulatory, and litigation practice areas.

FAQ

How do I get started if my agribusiness needs legal guidance?

Our attorneys begin with an initial consultation to understand your operation, challenges, and goals. From there, we assess risks and outline tailored legal strategies — whether it's compliance, contracts, or litigation defense.

Can your attorneys provide ongoing counsel for my farm or agribusiness, or do you only handle disputes?

We offer both. Many of our clients retain us for day-to-day guidance on contracts, regulatory matters, and employment issues, and we also provide strong defense if litigation or enforcement actions arise.

What experience does the firm have with agricultural businesses like mine?

Our attorneys have represented farming operations, cooperatives, processors, and agritech companies for decades. We understand the unique legal issues in agriculture, from land use to environmental regulations, and tailor our services accordingly.
