

Government & Public Entities

Municipalities, state agencies, federal contractors, and regulatory bodies.

Friday, Eldredge & Clark counsels counties, municipalities and special-purpose entities throughout the state on legal and operational needs. As a leader in shaping the Arkansas governmental and regulatory environment, we have strengths in counseling governmental entities that no other law firm in the state surpasses. Our lawyers have a leading bond counsel practice focused on the financing of public and nonprofit projects on behalf of local and state governmental agencies and special-purpose entities throughout Arkansas. Our tax law practice is second to none in the state, with lawyers who have done much to shape the Arkansas tax structure. And with the state's leading employee benefits practice, we represent educational institutions and governmental entities with their specialized needs.

FAQ

How do I begin working with your firm if my city, agency, or public body needs legal support?

We start with an initial consultation to understand your organization's structure, objectives, and challenges. From there, we develop strategies tailored to your governance, compliance, and litigation needs.

Do you provide guidance to public boards and officials on governance and policy matters?

Yes. We counsel councils, boards, and commissions on governance best practices, policy development, bylaws, and fiduciary duties to ensure sound decision-making.

Can you represent us in issuing bonds or other public financing mechanisms?

Our attorneys assist municipalities and agencies with bond offerings, public financing, and structuring capital projects in compliance with state and federal law.

Do you handle employment issues for public employees or unions?

Yes. We advise on public-sector labor relations, collective bargaining, wage and hour issues, OSHA compliance, and defend against employment-related claims.
